Financial strategy for Broadway Commercial Project approved

by Lindy Magner

Acting as the Redevelopment Agency at its April 20 meeting, the Lemon Grove City Council approved a financing strategy for the Broadway Commercial/Home Depot Project which would put into motion the issuance of 25-year tax allocation bonds, tying the agency to a repayment of nearly $18 million over the next 27 years.

City staff estimates that $450,000 in sales tax and $80,000 in property tax will annually flow to the city coffers from if Home Depot locates on about 10 acres between Broadway and North Avenue.

However, the 3-1 vote (with one abstention), showed that at least one council member had misgivings about approving a financial strategy for the project.

"I believe that tonight we have put a stamp of approval on the project, and I have yet to see any numbers that show us the sales tax will pay for this indebtedness of about $18 million," said Councilman Craig Lake when asked following the meeting his reasons for voting against the financing plan.

Lake stated that council members were presented with 50-page financing documents last Friday, three nights prior to the meeting.

"I don't have the ability to review such a document on the Saturday afternoon before Easter; this is the most massive debt the city will ever incur and I don't want to approve it without first reviewing it adequately," he said.

City staff projects that acquisition of various parcels which will make up the 10.045-acre site as well as site preparation costs and housing replacement costs for displaced homeowners and mobile home residents will carry a price tag of over $15 million.

Home Depot will fund $8.5 million ($6.5 million in advance) to the agency, while the agency itself will allot $7 million for the project, as outlined in staff reports.

With approval of the financing plan, the sale of bonds could begin as soon as late June, with the agency receiving funds in mid-July. The financing plan approved by the Redevelopment Agency includes the recommendation that even if the Home Depot project falls through, the bond sale will continue, with monies then used for other redevelopment projects.

During the public comment period, Elmwood Mobile Home Park resident Scott McDonald called on the redevelopment agency to consider relocating the 36 park residents "en masse," to an "area of blight" along Broadway (at Corona St.)

He proposed a 50-50 split in which the agency would fund half of what he estimates will be a $1 million cost of acquiring the property and placing mobile homes there (with some space available for rent by recreational vehicles.)

He believes that state funds are available for low interest loans for mobile home residents to finance the purchase of their trailer park.

However, when questioned by council members, McDonald stated he had no knowledge that the property owner of the proposed site would be willing to sell.

Also, trailer park residents expressed concern that a letter may have been sent to Elmwood Mobile Home Park owner Louis Noriega, strongly instructing him not to fill any rental spaces which become vacant.

Reading comments written by McDonald, Betty Carter stated that she "wanted answers now" to whether a letter was actually sent, and if so, on whose authority.

Council did not respond to her comments, but requested her list of questions for staff to review.

In other business, council passed a resolution which would appropriate about $4,000 of the city's "asset seizure" monies toward purchasing a personal computer and laser printer for the Lemon Grove Sheriff's Station.

Such equipment, as requested in a letter to the city by Sheriff Jim Roache, would allow those deputies with lap top computers to print their reports at the station.

Since July 1, 1990, the city has received about $9,000 which resulted from the seizure of assets of those involved in criminal activities such as narcotic sales.

Council also expressed its support for the San Diego Association of Government's (SANDAG) Growth Management Strategy draft document which addresses "quality of life factors" for the region.

Before council business was addressed, Capt. Jonathan Torchia of the Lemon Grove Fire Department was presented with a pin and certificate for his ten years of service with the department.

The annual Easter egg hunt went off at 9 a.m. (as usual) this year without some of us who read in both the city newsletter and the Review (which relied on the newsletter story) that the hunt began at 10 a.m. We apologize to those who missed the event for the error, and hope that the Easter bunny found them.

Jacob unveils reform plans

Second District Supervisorial candidate Dianne Jacob and a group of concerned taxpayers chose tax day, April 15, to unveil the most detailed plan for reforming county government ever offered by a candidate for Supervisor.

"I know how county government works," Jacob said before a group of tax reform activists in front of the county administration building. "I know where the skeletons are buried, where the budgets are padded, and where inefficiencies run rampant."

Jacob outlined her position paper on county government reform which includes the following key elements:

1. A limit on the number of county employees through employee attrition if possible;
2. A cut in top administrators' salaries, including the Board members themselves;
3. A commitment to "Just Say No" to unfunded state and federal mandates;
4. A commitment to fight for the more than $150 million a year in taxes paid by San Diegans that gets unfairly allocated to other parts of the state by the State legislature;
5. A zero-based budgeting system that requires each county department to justify its existence every year;
6. The establishment of an independent Budget Analyst to scrutinize the budgets of every county department and the annual budget proposed by the Chief Administrative Officer;
7. Numerous welfare reforms, including elimination of General Relief welfare payments to single able-bodied adults for a savings of some $28 million a year;
8. Streamlining of county functions to prevent duplication among departments and improve automation;
9. Privatization of services when it proves more efficient and cost effective;
10. Improvements in court fine collection procedures.

Jacob said just these beginning steps could save at least between $50 million and $100 million each year.

That kind of long-range aggressive planning is what taxpayers deserve, agreed supporters in attendance, including La Mesa Mayor Art Madrid, Mark Nelson, and former La Mesa Councilman Ernie Ewin.

"Dianne brings a refreshing perspective into the arena of public service," Mayor Madrid said. "She is by far the best qualified candidate to implement these changes."

B-Words Parking Peeves

A recent letter in my BB box dealt with vehicles parked on the streets of our city. Many of our streets are "handsome" in the words of the writer, and the clutter of large trucks, campers and motorhomes was deemed deplorable. We have had similar complaints in the past, and while addressing the problem, we have yet to come up with a satisfactory solution. It is like so many things that deal with common, everyday rights that we all enjoy, yet which are often abused by a few individuals.

The rule is that a vehicle cannot be legally parked on the street for longer than 72 hours at a stretch. This time begins when the code enforcement officer makes note of its presence, and then after the required 72 hour time span, he can issue a citation. We have had people tell us, "it has been there for two weeks already," when reporting such a vehicle. This obviously makes it necessary for a resident to report such violations promptly to City Hall. If, however the car or whatever is moved within that time span, then it is technically within the law.

Some large commercial trucks are prohibited from parking at all on many of our city streets. Home occupations that are legally allowed may not have employees parking at their location, or have commercial vehicles going in and out of the premises. This applies to owned trucks or delivery vans that are part of doing business. In other words, a home occupation may exist only if no outward sign of the business is evident to the neighborhood.

Abandoned vehicles, even if on private property and in plain view so as to constitute blight of the neighborhood, can be reported to Craig Bonner at City Hall - 464-6934. There are many campers and motorhomes parked around the City, but most seem to be well cared for and located in a fairly neat fashion. Obviously, many homes were not planned to accommodate the size of these vehicles in garages, or even on a normal lot without some inconvenience. They do create visual obstructions in many cases and, of course, must comply with the 72 hour rule if parked on the street. There are also rules against anyone living in a motorhome for any period of time. They cannot be used as granny flats or second apartments as an adjunct to a single family home.

These problems are vexing ones, and we must depend upon the public to assist in solving them. Mr. Bonner cannot cruise the city looking for these violations, as he is very busy just responding to complaints. If you perceive a violation, please call City Hall and report it so that he can work it into his scheduled rounds. It also might be wise for each of us to ask ourselves if we may be part of the problem. "Have I had a relative in that motorhome out back for an extended period?" Have I parked my car across a driveway over at the soccer field?" Have I parked my company truck illegally on my street, or raced the engine to warm it up early of a morning?"

The golden rule reads "Thou shalt do unto others"... not "to others."

If you have questions or suggestions for Dr. Burns, send them to P.O. Box BB, Lemon Grove, CA 91946

WANTED : Dr. Jerry Legerton For his Position on Youth Programs

My father was 56 years old when I was born. He was an attorney, CPA and had served as a Superior Court Judge. Since he was very busy and an older parent, youth programs were a necessity and a wonderful part of my life growing up. I was involved in YMCA and youth sports. I joined scouting and became an Eagle Scout. I support youth programs.

Today more than ever youth programs are an absolute necessity. With families having both parents working, many single parent families, the increase in gang activity and substance abuse, and the reduction of freedom by access to rural areas for unrestricted play and adventure, today's youth need positive alternatives. Currently, I serve on the Board of Directors of the Grossmont Davis YMCA, I am a friend of Scouting, and for 8 years served as a teacher and leader of church based youth programs.

Since these programs indirectly benefit all of us, I support a strong program of after school recreation and cultural development. I believe the City must participate in the development of the infrastructure for youth programs with parks, recreation centers and playing fields. Further, the City must provide the leadership and organization for many of the programs. When the City lacks the human resources, it should contribute to the financial support of organizations having programs in place. Those who directly benefit should pay a reasonable portion of the costs according to their ability to pay as determined by conventional social service methods.

Commentary

by Paul Treske

It's in the air all around us! We read it in the newspapers and hear it on radio and TV. The government has lost touch with the people! Washington no longer really cares what we think and we now seriously mistrust our federal government! If this is really true, and I have the awful feeling that it is, then the very basis of our democracy is at risk.

We have a president whom only 39 percent of the public thinks is doing a decent job. We have a Congress so scorched by controversy that dozens of its members have given up trying for re-election in '92 and dozens more are expected to be ousted by an angry populace that feels betrayed and abandoned.

For a few months last year, the nation seemed mostly united as we unleashed Desert Storm on a despicable Saddam Hussein. But now we hear from the L.A. Times that some of the very weapons used by Saddam against American and United Nations troops were secretly provided, without the approval of Congress (or anyone else) to the Iraqis through deals with Saudi Arabia as middleman.

Major issues concerning the armaments of war are supposed to be shared with the public, or at least their representation in Congress according to a regulation called the Arms Export Control Act. The reason for this is obvious. More approval than that of the man in the White House and the Joint Chiefs of Staff ought to be needed before we willy-nilly arm the volatile nations in the globe's fire points. Simply stated, the Arms Export Control Act requires the President to notify Congress when a foreign country transfers American-supplied weapons to a third country without authorization.

Now, according to the Times report, classified documents have come to light showing that no such notification was given when Saudi Arabia transferred U.S. made weapons to Iraq beginning in the mid 1980s, apparently because Presidents Reagan and later Bush feared congressional opposition to its plans to arm the Saudis with such highly technical weapons as the AWACS radar planes. Bush, seemingly set on arming Iraq to the teeth as a counterbalance to Iran continued this type of arms almost to the eve of the Iraqi assault on Kuwait.

Down an uncertain road

This is not the only covert arms transfer finding the light of day in recent months. Israel is reported to have made extensive arms sales to Iran in the mid 1980s as part of Reagan's covert plan to gain favor in Iran and obtain freedom for American hostages. Israel is also suspected of selling American arms to other nations as well.

Of course, one could be cynical and say, "why get upset by this-it happens all the time anyway."

One is indeed upset because we seem to be reaching a crossroads at which our form of representative government will totally cease effectiveness. We see now a presidential primary where close to a majority of voters are choosing "none of the above." The numbers of those actually going to the ballot box to vote are declining steadily as the number of the disenfranchised grows. We see an out-of-control Congress paying little or no attention to its constituents until either an election or a scandal sends them flying home to exercise damage control. And finally, as exemplified by the U.S. to Saudi Arabia to Iraq under the table arms dealing, we have a White House that no longer thinks we are important or to be bothered with! Only those with big power, big money or both are deciding what happens to us now and in the decades to come.

Under such circumstances some countries have gone to open rebellion. Others have called on a heroic dictator who has promised them all of the empowerments they lack. What we will do is unclear. Large scale rebellion or dictatorship seem unlikely given our traditions. Possibly one positive direction would see power lessened in Washington and more returned to state and local municipalities. My own crystal ball is clouded and unproductive. But, we are indeed at a most ominous crossroads. The American people cannot continue to lose belief and trust in our federal government without drastic events ensuing, and the outcome of those events could be the loss of the America we have known.

From Where I Sit

Love thy neighbor

by Frank Andrews

The year was 1945, the "Big One" was over, and we were all going back home to resume our old lives. Some veterans chose to start a new life in a new country.

I met Eric Swinkle and his young wife, Freda, on my first Canadian fishing trip in the early spring of '46. The Swinkles had just arrived from Germany to start their new life in the freedom of the vast Canadian wilderness. They had received a section, 640 acres, of woodlands adjacent to a beautiful crystal clear lake from the Canadian government on a "develop-to-own" basis. When I met this most unusual couple, they had already built a temporary lean-to cabin by the lakeshore and had great plans for the future.

I got to know Eric a little better on each fishing trip north. I found out that he was trained for the Nazi elite S.S. troops and I also soon found out that he had all the personality traits to fill the bill.

While winter fishing through the thick ice in front of Swinkle's place, I also got to know Eric's pet deer, a beautiful doe and her cute, little fawn. We fed the deer beer from the bottle and cigarettes from our hand. Eric was hard on the outside but a "pussy cat" on the inside.

The local Canadians who also would become my good friends had a fierce hatred toward Eric and Freda. It was hard to go from hate to love in such a short time. Eric was to learn the hard way that he wasn't welcome in this tiny community, but he was German and very determined.

Eric and Freda built their lodge all by themselves without any help from the community. Eric cut down the trees, cut them into lumber, and dragged it with his horse up to the building site right on the lakeshore. They had built themselves the most beautiful tourist facility with all the accessories. Eric and Freda had worked long and hard only to stand back one cold night and watch it all burn to the ground. Rumor has it that the locals were so full of jealousy and hatred that this burning was inevitable.

Nearly before the embers had died the Swinkles were felling more trees and starting their new lodge. I hadn't agreed with all they stood for, but I did feel sorry for them in their sad situation and admired their tremendous determination.

After his second Lodge was finished and in operation Eric purchased a small airplane, installed pontoons, and started a very lucrative wholesale minnow business. He had his minnow traps set all over that huge chain of lakes. While on one of my solo fishing trips I nearly ran into one of Eric's big wooden traps floating aimlessly out in the middle of the lake. I stopped and hauled it aboard my little boat and was to return it to my Nazi friend. I just got underway when Eric swooped down on me nearly scaring me out of my little wits. He landed on the water, taxied along side, and proceeded to scold me for stealing his property with the intensity of a Gestapo interrogation, all in a very heavy German accent. In those past several years of knowing Eric, I really didn't know him at all.

The Swinkles are still alive and well on the shores of the lake, but "happy," I'm doubtful. They have a grown son and daughter (with some grandkids) that left home after their fill of military-style discipline. There is no 'love thy neighbor' atmosphere present with rest of the locals, but I guess that is what the Swinkles were trained for and are doing fine in their own little world.

Teenage Sexuality

by Tasha Stelse, managing editor, Helix Fling

SEX. Now that I have your attention ... sex in the lives of teens is a vital issue. When you travel down the hallways of school, or visit a mall, you realize how much of an issue it is. Classmates, girls that you have known for what seems like ages, are going to be mothers. It is hard to believe, but girls are having babies at as young as 12 years old.

Perhaps the teenage pregnancy rate is so high due to the fact that teens are not well informed of how to obtain contraceptive devices. Or that they are just not responsible enough to take the proper precautions. Whatever the reason may be, if they feel that they are mature enough to have sex, then they should take the initiative to protect themselves from the risks of living a sexually-active lifestyle. Risks concerning pregnancy, diseases, and even death!

Planned Parenthood clinics are easily accessible to girls of all ages. Birth control pills, condoms, and other contraceptives are available, but still these clinics are not being used to their full advantages. The simple fact for this is that young women are afraid of their parents finding out, or of the initial embarrassment of visiting the clinic. These reasons alone are enough for a girl to say "Forget it!"

If you were to stop and think about it, a few moments of embarrassment is far better than a few years off your childhood, or your life. How many teens can truthfully admit that they are ready to raise a child? Would they be able to afford all the necessities to keep a baby healthy? Bottles, formula, clothing, doctor visits, medicine, and most of all, love. For some with the support of their families it would be possible, for others, it is unthinkable. Why take the risk if it could have been prevented?

It is hard for some parents to face the fact that their teenage daughters are engaging in sexual activity. Maybe because they are scared that their "little girl" is growing up and able to make her own decisions. Or perhaps they do not believe that their child is emotionally mature enough to have sex.

Though this may be true, parents must bear in mind, that their chil-

Say it with flowers

by Elaine L. Jack

I'd like to send a bouquet to every woman in America.

You deserve roses. Dozen and dozens of fresh, fragrant, long-stemmed roses.

It's not easy being a woman today.

The problem is, everyone presumes to tell you what you're supposed to be.

Slender and photogenic. Able to rise to the executive suite at work and to the challenge of keeping the house clean. Skilled at maintaining good relationships with husband, kids, neighbors, and co-workers. You also need to be a leader in keeping the community a safe place for families, a volunteer in the school system, and a gourmet cook. In addition, you must find time for your own interests. And time to relax. Be sure to schedule that in.

It makes me tired just thinking about it all.

I consider myself a busy woman. I've found very few women who aren't. We often find ourselves blocking out our lives in bits of time, as if playing with a giant jigsaw puzzle. When the pieces for family, work, and worship fit together well, and we can reserve a few pieces for personal enrichment or simply catching our breath, it's a good feeling. When the pieces don't fit, and the picture doesn't make sense, frustration and self-doubt creep in. This is not good for women. And, we try running faster.

But now I'd like to pull the plug on the treadmill for a few moments, bring out the mirror, and have you look straight into it. When you're not running, it's easier to see who you are.

What do you see reflected in the mirror?

Most of the women I see are pretty remarkable.

I see women who are not perfect in every way, but who are beautiful. They're doing their best to make a good life for themselves and those around them. They're touching lives in wonderful ways. Their incredible talents and abilities are being recognized and used to better the world.

I see very busy women who are committed to their families. Some people might say that's old-fashioned, but it's not. As I travel I come in contact with thousands of women around the world each year. Nearly every woman I meet makes family her highest priority. They work hard at it.

A single parent mother may be working two jobs to support her family, and working just as hard to make room for quality time with her children. A woman whose husband is the family's sole provider may have the luxury of spending quality time, too, with her family. A woman who's never married may show great concern for siblings or parents, or a newly-developed "family" of close friends. Another woman may work outside the home to help meet family expenses and arrange her hours to be there when the kids get home from school.

I also see women who need help -- with earning higher wages, getting a better education, with raising children, managing a household, and many other things. Some help may come from a supportive spouse or other members of the family. Sometimes working out solutions takes faith, courage, and stamina.

Amid many circumstances, women work hard at keeping their lives going, and often the lives of those around them. It may not be easy. But women know that the rewards of making a significant contribution to family, or community, church and society, can be sweet indeed.

What these women need isn't criticism, but more cheerleaders giving them encouragement and thanks for all they do. They need someone telling them that the perfect woman has not yet been genetically designed -- and that they're not expected to "do it all." What they can do is important. They need to know that they are pretty remarkable.

So here are the roses I promised. One for doing your best. One for caring about the people in your life. One for the work you do inside and outside of your home. One for having faith when the going gets rough. One for patience. One for the unique, extraordinary things about you.

It's only a half dozen roses, I know, and not really enough. But it's a start.

(Elaine L. Jack is president of the Relief Society, celebrating 150 years as the women's organization of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.)

dren are mature enough to make their own decisions. If one of those decisions is to have sex, then it is their decision to do so. Adults may not agree with girls taking birth control pills, but if it can keep them from becoming pregnant, then it should not be forbidden. If a girl wants to have sex, she will, whether or not she is permitted to take the pill. This situation is similar to having a swimming pool in your backyard. The child may be forbidden to go in to the pool. The parents may go so far as to put a fence around it to keep the child out. No matter what steps are taken to keep the child away from the pool, they will find a way to get in. So shouldn't the child be taught how to swim?

In the public mind, kids who have sex are by definition "promiscuous." They never have love relationships, let alone monogamous ones. Did anyone - doctor, educator, birth control provider, social service agency - suggest that teenager's sexual desires (you know, sexual desires, those sort of primal impulses responsible for our population's continued existence) are as legitimate as adults? That making it possible for teenage girls to enjoy sex without fear of pregnancy might be a positive thing?

I am not saying that it is right for teenagers to be promiscuous, but if you plan to have sex, then take the proper precautions. Whether it is from a clinic, a private doctor, or even a drug store, do something to protect yourself, and your partner from the sexual dangers present today.

La Mesan to have lead in next CYT show

Wendy Provence, a resident of La Mesa, is pictured here with Laura Fisk (Provence is on the left). The girls have been double cast in the role of Anne Shirley, and will appear in the Christian Youth Theater (CYT) production of "Anne of Green Gables."

Provence has two previous CYT productions to her credit. She appeared in the summer production of "Bye, Bye, Birdie" and had a starring role as Wendy in the Spring of '91 production of "Mary Poppins."

Performance dates for Christian Youth Theater's musical, "Anne of Green Gables" are May 21, 22, 29 and 30 at 7:00 p.m. and May 23, 24, 30 and 31 at 2 p.m. at Lewis Junior High, 5170 Greenbrier in San Diego.

Tickets are $5-7, with special discounts for groups of 15 or more.

Tutino goes to Sacramento

Dr. Andrew Tutino, a Lemon Grove doctor of chiropractic, attended a legislative conference on April 7, 1992, at the State Capitol.

At this Annual California Chiropractic Association Legislative Conference, doctors from around the state gathered to meet with legislators and discuss current health care trends and legislation.

During the all-day event, Dr. Tutino attended committee hearings and met with district representatives such as Senator Lucy Killea and Assembly member Carol Bentley to discuss CCA-sponsored legislation. During the luncheon, the doctors and legislators enjoyed a presentation by William C. Meeker, D.C., MPH, President of the Consortium for Chiropractic Research on "The Appropriateness of Spinal Manipulation for Low Back Pain."

The California Chiropractic Association is the largest state chiropractic association in the U.S. with more than 4,000 members.

This class will be offered on Saturday, May 16 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Grossmont Hospital's Brier Patch Campus, 9000 Wakarusa Street in La Mesa.

For registration and information, call Grossmont Hospital's Senior Programs department at 668-4288.

Animal Control Shelters closing on Mondays

As a part of a comprehensive cost-cutting measure by the County of San Diego, several County agencies will soon reduce their hours or close their offices on selected days.

The Department of Animal Control's three shelters will be closed to the public on Mondays beginning April 20. County Animal Shelters will continue to remain open from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, and will now be open to the public on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. beginning April 18.

"Although this will reduce somewhat the number of hours that the shelters will be open, we expect that our full Saturday hours will provide more convenient public access to our facilities," said Hector Cazares, Acting Director of the Department of Animal Control.

The public is reminded that unidentified impounded cats are held for a 72-hour period and unidentified impounded dogs are held for three working days. Because of the new County shelter hours, Saturday will be considered a working day for holding period purposes.
